farmers of this country should be permitted to feed the people of the United States as whether farmers of other countries should be allowed to do so.

Farquhar of New York, [illegible] expressed his admiration for the sagacity of the Democratic party in [illegible] opening the northern borders to Canadian farmers. If that was free American policy let the committee follow it. But, along the Canadian border Democrats were intelligent farmers who would resent the opinion of this committee on the question when November came around.

Mills, of Texas, said that one of the objections made to the clause was that it removed the duty on [illegible] was a mistake, as potatoes were specially provided for in another portion of the bill. The clause, he declared, was in the interest of the consumer alone, and he appealed to gentlemen where the republicans would be willing to reduce the tax.

Dingley, of Pennsylvania, [illegible] they were ready to repeal internal taxes.

Yes, replied Mr. Mills, you want free whiskey. You do not say in your platform that you would reduce the duties on sugar and rice. The convention has never told what you have contended for. Your party demands free whiskey. We will go with you to the country on that question. We demand a reduction on those things which enter into consumption as necessaries, and demand that the tax shall remain only [illegible]

J. D. Taylor, of Ohio, challenged the statement that the republican party was in favor of free whisky. All persons of the republican party are in favor of abolishing internal taxes because they believe it to be unwise as a system. That the republican party was in favor of free whiskey was absurd, and he [illegible] the charge to that effect. Under the circumstances a man who would coolly and with his judgment in his hand assert that the republican party was in favor of free whiskey might be developed according to the Darwinian theory [illegible] countless cycles of time without mounting intellectually to the position of a brute. [Laughter and applause on the republican side.]

Mills—The platform of the republican party says it is in favor of the repeal of the internal revenue. It says it is in favor of taking the tax of alcohol used in the arts, and if that is not enough, it is in favor of taking off all internal taxes. That is what is understood by the country as being in favor of free whiskey. Mills said it was well known that the majority of the republican party was opposed to the extreme position which the republicans had taken at Chicago. For the first time, at Chicago, had the republican party taken a position before the American people in favor of keeping taxes on the necessities of life and demanding that the treasury should be emptied by taking the tax off of whiskey. No amount of disclaiming would convince the people that the party in power would not take the tax off whiskey and leave it on articles of necessity.

Kelley, of Pennsylvania, said he advocated repeal of war taxes which Jefferson had denounced as an infernal system. He demanded that the democracy should walk in the steps of the Jeffersons of that party, and should maintain its holier precedence by removing every vestige of the national government from the fields, factories and orchards of the south. He demanded that the democrats carry out their platform of 1884, which promised an abolition of internal taxes. The gentleman from Texas could not deny that it was the democratic promise of 1884 to the tobacco growers, fruit growers and distillers of the south that they should be relieved from internal taxation, and the provision he had asked that this great source of revenue be committed to the people of the state, and under state law to municipalities of the state, and those of the government which bore the burden of crime and vice and insanity should have whatever revenue might be justly derived from it.

Reed of Maine—The gentleman from Texas did not mean to be believed when he said the republican party was for free whiskey, because the gentleman knew there would not be enough democrats left to make up an electoral ticket to suit the states of the union if they had confidence in his statement. [Laughter.] The gentleman, if he had taken the trouble to read the Chicago platform, knew his statement was one of those aservations which was worthy of the dignity of the stump and not of the position of chairman of the committee of ways and means of the house of representatives. The gentleman knew the position of the republican party on this subject was too simple to be turned in his way, but if the democratic party should ever commence the campaign without false statements its own friends would not know it. The gentleman from Texas meant to say he would have to the whiskey monopoly and give it protection. Let him say so, and let him say so openly and manfully, and not get behind miscellaneous sentences which mean nothing.

Weaver, of Iowa, criticized the internal revenue plank of the Chicago platform.

After some further discussion, Baker's motion was defeated and the committee rose.

On motion of Randall, of Pennsylvania, a joint resolution was passed extending for three days from June 30 the provisions of the existing appropriation laws in case the appropriation bills are not passed before the end of the fiscal year.

The committee then rose.

Belmont, of New York, called up the conference report on the consular and diplomatic bill, and it was agreed to. It reports concurrence on all amendments, except that appropriating $25,000 for a commission to explore the Congo basin.

The house then adjourned.

A Kentucky Tragedy.

LOUISVILLE, June 28.—Word reached here this afternoon from Dirlan, Ky., that on Saturday Marion Stewart [illegible] and killed Reporte and his brother at their home near that place. Marion and John Stewart, Tip Osborne, and Jeff Hall were playing cards when a dispute arose over some point in the game. All had been drinking and blows passed. Marion then drew a navy revolver and shot John through the brain. He turned to shoot Osborne, who was his stepson. Osborne ran, followed by Stewart. Mrs. Stewart [illegible] and sent a bullet in the back part of her daughter's temple. Osborne by this time had escaped, and Stewart turned his attention to Hall. Hall got away but came back half an hour later, when Stewart again tried to kill him, but Hall again escaped. Seeing his wife lying dead outside the door and his brother in a dying condition inside, Stewart turned to his eldest daughter, 14 years old and said: Good bye, do the best you can for the child ren, and started up the mountainside. The children carried their dead mother into the house where their father's brother was dying. Mrs. Stewart leaves seven children, the oldest 14 years of age, and the youngest a babe nursing. John Stewart leaves a wife and small family. No attempt at arrest has been made, although Tip Osborne has sworn vengeance against Stewart for killing his mother.

Tariff Notified.

CHICAGO, June 28. The democratic committee arrived here to-day and formally notified Allen G. Thurman of his nomination for the office of vice president.

Vanderbilt Dying.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Joseph Greenhold, who sold a farm valued at $2,500 on his father's estate, 650 Broadway, was charged with theft in court to-day by [illegible] and committed in default of $5,000 bail.

The Wrong Man.

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich., June 28. The [illegible] Chief of Police, Wm. Wood, has received [illegible] his wife homeless. Kingston has been by three fiendish [illegible] and [illegible] he has property in Chicago and Colorado valued at $100,000. All efforts to discover the heirs have proved fruitless, although he is known to have two sisters in America and a brother in Paris, France.

The Campaign Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—William H. Barnum, chairman of the national democratic committee, called at the White House this morning and had a short interview with the president regarding the composition of the democratic campaign committee. The president suggested several names. Barnum will announce by Saturday night who the members of the committee are.

Society of Civil Engineers.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 28. The annual session of the American society of Civil Engineers opened here to-day. Owing to the death of a member of his family, the president of the society, Thos. C. Keefer, was not present at the convention. The meeting was called to order by Vice President Cross. Mayor Two hundred members and their ladies were present.

Sheridan's Removal Postponed.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The removal of General Sheridan to Nonquitt has been postponed until to-morrow on account of rain.

WASHINGTON, June 29, 9 p. m. General Sheridan seems to be more comfortable since the weather has grown cooler. He has rested well all day, and the contemplated transfer from his home to the Swatara was postponed on account of [illegible]

The Mexican Central's Fire.

EL PASO, Tex., June 28.—The extent of loss by burning of the Mexican Central freight depot at Paso del Norte cannot yet be learned, because much of the property destroyed was freight, the value of which is not easily learned. The latest report is that 75 freight cars were destroyed, mostly loaded. The buildings were valued at about $5000. Three thousand tons worth one dollar apiece were burned. The fire will not materially delay shipments.

Democratic Caucus.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Democrats of the senate held an "order of business" caucus to-day, and formally decided by vote to insist on the postponement of all matters before the senate except regular appropriation bills, and to oppose the usual adjournment from Thursday until Monday, the purpose being to secure the passage of the more important appropriation bills before the end of the fiscal year, and thus avoid the necessity of passing resolutions to keep the departments running.

A Terrible Crime.

PORTSMOUTH, Ill., July 28.—Chas. Decklar, a farmer of Buena Vista, sent his children from the house to-day, and crept up behind his wife and shot her through the brain. Decklar then went into the sitting room, and placing the revolver at his own breast sent a bullet almost through his heart. Throwing down the revolver he drew a razor and cut his throat so desperately that the head was almost severed from the body. No reason is known for the terrible crime.

Stock Markets.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Money easy, 1½ prime paper 4 to 6. The indisposition to trade, even among room traders, at present, is something remarkable, and the stock market to-day reached the acme of dullness, for though there was quite a business done during the forenoon, afternoon trading was next to nothing. The result of the day's trading is to [illegible] respective list fractional amounts higher than last previous sales, [illegible] seven being only [illegible] cents.

Pardoned from Canon.

DENVER, June 28.—Lieut. Governor Meldrum to-day pardoned from the penitentiary Sylvester Campagne, the Italian boy who twelve years ago was implicated in the terrible butchery of several of his countrymen in an old cabin on Lawrence street. The boy was at the time 13 years of age, and was told by old man Gallotta to keep up his music while the murders were being committed. Campagne, who ran away after the murder was captured and tortured to death. Upon the arrival of friends he petitioned pardon and received a sentence for life, with four others. Since that time old man Gallotta who was one of the murdered, was pardoned by Governor Eaton, Gallotta's son-in-law, who is serving a few months, and a third one was pardoned also, and now the two [illegible]

Disarming Indians.

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Late advices from the Indian territory say the Chickasaw Indian police aided by deputy United States marshals are disarming every man who is carrying a pistol contrary to the tribal law. Purcell was raided yesterday and the searchers were rewarded with about a dozen dead or six shooters which they took from different Indians. This is a precautionary system against what is regarded as inevitable war which may break out any day between the Chickasaws and non-citizens on account of a refusal to pay tax by the latter.

COLORADO CITY NOTES.

Mr. John Frizzell returned to Kansas last yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs Charles Coburn, of Burlington, Kas., are among the recent arrivals. They expect to reside permanently in Colorado City.

The street car line to Colorado Springs has been done a week to-day, and there is now a car every twenty minutes.

Mr. J. A. Corson, editor of the Sentinel, left yesterday with his family for Manitou Park. He will return in a day or two, but his family will remain during the heated term.

Posters advertising the Fourth of July celebration have been distributed in a number of towns and cities in the state. The committees expect a large crowd of visitors, and will be prepared to accommodate them.

Editor Dodson, of the Eagle, who has heretofore been perched on the political fence, has swung out on one of the flanks, and the Eagle will henceforth wave the red bandana from its peak and scream for Cleveland and his policy.

A corps of Rock Island surveyors have been at work for several days along the route of the Midland between Colorado Springs and Colorado City, and rumor has it that the Rock Island will connect with the Midland at the western outskirts of Colorado Springs, and that a union depot will be built in the vicinity of the great house in West Colorado Springs. If this proves true, it will be a big card for Colorado City.

DISTRICT CONVENTION.

Proceedings of the W. C. T. U. Southern District Convention.

The Convention Completes its Labors Yesterday and Adjourns.

Reports Presented from all the Standing Committees.

Officers Elected to Serve During the Coming Year.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the Southern district of Colorado concluded a most successful and profitable convention yesterday. The morning session was opened by devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Orphans of Leadville. The minutes as read were approved. A most thoughtful paper was then read by Miss Rose Jackson of Colorado City treating upon hygiene. This was followed by [illegible] Mrs. Dr. Cowan of Colorado Springs, in a carefully prepared and instructive paper upon "Mothers' Meetings," emphasizing especially the duty of parents in requiring strict obedience from their children. The plan of work committee, through its chairman, Mrs. M. J. Telford, brought in a report embodying most practical recommendations which, if carried out, will give a grand impetus to the movement for the [illegible] The noontide hour of prayer was observed, led by Mrs. Tatum.

Mrs. Beach of Denver as the financial secretary of "The Cottage Home of Colorado" made a strong appeal for the co-operation of not only the W. C. T. U. of the district, but of all who have pity for the erring, and will help to purer and safer paths those who in their bewilderment have lost their way. The remarks of Mrs. Beach indicated that a system and sound philosophy form the basis upon which the home is managed.

The afternoon session opened early and with a good attendance. Miss Wilson giving a Bible reading was a part of the devotional exercises. As superintendent of evangelistic work, Mrs. Beach again took the platform to present this most important branch of the work. Her remarks were apt, practical and stirring.

Mrs. Telford, of "The Challenge," then presented the interests of that paper, and a great value it is, as an organ of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Woodward, Colonel Holt and others urged the importance of subscriptions for stock in the [illegible] Publishing Association, and resulted in pledges from each local union represented in the convention, and also from individuals. A number of subscriptions to the paper were also secured.

The report of the committee upon district constitution was presented by Mrs. Chambers, and was adopted.

A very effective chalk talk was given by Miss Maud Green, of Manitou to the children, her subject being "Character." [illegible] was followed by Mrs. Farrar, of Colorado Springs, Mrs. Maryatt, of Del Norte, and others.

Very cheering reports were received from various Loyal Temperance Legions, that of Salida being very encouraging. The report of the committee on resolutions was presented by Mrs. Owen, of Pueblo, the chairman. The success of the prohibition party was gratefully referred to, and co-operation prayers and sympathy were pledged. A resolution very complimentary to Colonel C. J. Holt for the work he is doing and recognizing the services of Mrs. C. M. Woodward, state and national organizer, was passed. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. Eva Higgins, La Veta.

Vice President—Mrs. Dr. Owen, Pueblo.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. L. B. Lester, Salida.

Corresponding Secretary—Miss Hattie Strange, La Veta.

Treasurer—Mrs. J. E. Newlon, Colorado Springs.

District Superintendent of Juvenile Work—Mrs. H. H. Maryatt, Manitou.

The convention then adjourned to meet in Salida next December.

The game of base ball to-morrow afternoon between the Colorado Springs club and the Pride of Denver, should be well attended as it will be doubtless be a good game. The Pride are determined to regain their laurels lost here June 16th and are coming down strongly reinforced and determined to win. The home team are in fine trim and eager for a game. They will work hard to keep up their reputation as the best amateur nine in the state. Bates and Everett will probably be the battery for the Denvers as they are the best ones in that city. For [illegible] and McMillan will [illegible]

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON,
Of Indiana.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON,
Of New York.

The only objection to Harrison yet raised is that he is only objected to any violation of treaty obligations in congressional legislation. The great objection to Morton is that he has illustrated the possibilities of the American boy by starting poor and friendless and winning fame and fortune. Such objections will not hurt.

A complaint has been made that several people have been out shooting birds for sport. It is a brutal kind of pleasure to indulge in at best, fortunately the laws of this state make such an act a misdemeanor. It is against the laws of the state to kill any birds from November 15th to October 1st of the following year, and then the only birds that may be killed are the partridge, pheasant, prairie chicken and grouse. We hope the Humane society will instruct its agents to secure the punishment of all such offenders against the law.

The republican party has this distinctive feature that its members think for themselves. No decision can be drawn which will express every individual opinion. The reasons that appeared good for the nomination of one candidate and the defeat of another were clear and strong. But the individual differences of opinion will not prevent republicans from falling into line and fighting unitedly in a common cause. The subjects on which there is a difference of opinion are not to be decided this fall. The next congress will consider them. There need be no fear that any congress will abolish the whiskey tax to create surplus. A surplus operation would be a much better solution of the surplus difficulty.

If all the statements made by the friends of the duty on lumber are correct, it would be a great blessing to this country if the reduction of the tariff on lumber should become a law. The quickest and largest fortunes made in any legitimate business in this country of late years have been made by the lumber men. The lumbermen say that if the duty is reduced there will be no more cut. On reflection, this would not be a very bad thing for the country. The rapid way in which our forests have been cut down in the last twenty years has aroused the attention of those who have thoughtfully considered our resources. So large an area of timber land has been cut down that it has greatly enhanced the value of what is left. From present appearances, in ten years from now trees will become so scarce that it will be rather a serious question to provide a supply of lumber for building at reasonable rates. If what the lumbermen tell us is true, therefore, the repeal of the tariff offers an admirable solution of our difficulty. Instead of cutting our own trees, our lumbermen will cross the border and cut the Canadian woods, while our own are growing up again to furnish the timber for another generation. What we want now is that kind of legislation which shall protect our forests rather than make it easy and certain that our lumbermen will continue to rapidly diminish their area. The beds of coal and iron ore are practically inexhaustible. Every ton of coal or iron ore mined adds to the wealth of this country, and, hence, everything that can be done to encourage these industries should be done. But our forests are not inexhaustible. They are limited in extent and all thoughtful men say there is great need of protecting them. The issue that the reduction of the lumber tariff presents is not an issue, therefore, between protection and free trade, but whether we shall protect the lumbermen, who have already made colossal fortunes out of the lumber business, or whether we shall protect our forests. Parenthetically we may remark that ninety-five per cent of the wage-workers in the lumber business are French Canadians and so it cannot be said that driving the lumber across the border is throwing American labor out of employment. The good American in his unselfish way would be quite content to see the forests of Canada suffer than to see our own.

A GREAT WHIG CANDIDATE.

Timely Sketch of William Henry Harrison's Place in Indiana's History.

From the Indianapolis Journal.

Gen. William Henry Harrison was governor of Indiana territory twelve years, his administration dating from 1801. His territorial secretary, and occasional acting governor, during eight years of the time, was John Gibson, who had been for many years a trader among the Indian tribes of the Northwest, and acted as guide to Lord Dunmore in the expedition of 1774 against the Shawnees of the Scioto valley. It was on the occasion of Gibson's visit to the Shawnee village capturing this expedition that Logan, the Mingo, by some called Logan, the Cayuga chief, made his celebrated speech, understood and their speaker to utter that pathetic complaint that is known all over the world as the finest specimen of Indian eloquence. Gibson wrote it out from memory, and Jefferson got it for his Notes. Where it reached the public ear and its connection with the early history of Indiana. The duties and difficulties of Governor Harrison's position were largely of Indian affairs and across the whole period of the active career and service His administration covered the whole quantity of the greatest of Indian statesmen, Tecumseh. He was almost continually in collision, armed or diplomatic, with the wily and ambitious Shawnee chief, and the latter's schemes, left him at the end of the English alliance of 1812, and destroyed that and the great chief himself the next year at the battle of the Thames. To General Harrison in the eighth of the line of successful military operations following the outbreak of the war of 1812, which, restored confidence to western settlement and immigration, and gave the first impulse to the current which seventy-five years later is still moving healthfully and prosperously.

It is no wonder that General Harrison was popular in Indiana. She voted for him as Maine went for Governor Kent, according to the old Tippecanoe song. Yet he was never in Indiana. Till the beginning of 1853, twenty years after he had left the executive chair of the territory, and never returned but once, in 1838, and then only to pass through. The first visit, in the line of January, 1836, was made the occasion of a public demonstration on the 17th—the general leaving town for a few days on business and returning at that time—when the legislature gave him a public reception at the old court house—which was then the capitol, too—and a ball over at Washington hall, the leading "tavern" then, on the southeast corner of Pennsylvania and Washington streets, where he made a strong union speech. At that time Calhoun and nullification—or secession by another name—and the conflict of their supporters with the union sentiment were the dominant political ideas. There were no Indiana sympathizers with nullification as there was thirty years later with its bloody-minded son and heir-at-law—the rebellion.

The general's nomination at Harrisburg early in December, 1839, was received in Indiana with a welcome never given to any nomination since. A procession in honor of its announcement, a mass ratification meeting, marched along Washington street on one of the coldest days of the winter of 1839-40. Thousands of enthusiastic whigs lined the sidewalks and cheered as long as they had breath, and when that gave out they still swung their hats and sent through the motions. Mr. Wilson Parker, still living here, a leading banker of that day and a pillar of the Episcopal church and favor, is said to have kept his head so constantly uncovered in his cheering that his frock his ears. But the greatest exhibition of party zeal was the construction of a regular old backwoods log cabin, complete, with a dirt floor and puncheon door, and a hole sawed for a window, built near the northeast corner of Washington and Illinois streets, site of the Bates house. The door was closed by a wooden latch, lifted from the outside by a buckskin string through a hole. Here was Gen. Harrison's famous allusion to the log cabin and the latch string always hanging out, as a sign of pioneer hospitality, and the hard cider barrel! Found its representation inside a barrel that frequently held cider and occasionally didn't. When it wasn't cider, either. It was built to symbolize a monster whiggery meeting, but was left for two or three years unfinished as a sailor shop by Samuel P. Daniels and John Montgomery, till it was removed to make room for Easton's carriage shop, the predecessor of the Bates house.

On the 5th of October, 1840, a huge mass meeting was held here, the oratory being done chiefly in the hall of the house in the new state house and in the portico at the south front, but the opportunities of ambitious eloquence were varied by dry goods boxes in street corners. There is living now but one of the orators who made that meeting an event in the state's political history, Jonathan McCarty, of the Whitewater valley, went to Iowa, ran for congress at the first election in the Keokuk district in 1846, was beaten, and went down out of sight. Joseph J. White, of Jefferson, went to congress in 1841, removed to New York, and turned up a leader of the "Free Soil" Van Buren democracy in the Buffalo convention of 1848 which declared that the occasion was the poetry of politics and the religion of party. George H. Proffit followed Tyler, got a foreign mission, and soon after died. Mr. Robinson, of Jefferson, a brilliant promise, was already marked by consumption. Caleb B. Smith, Samuel W. Parker, Henry S. Lane need no further mention. Col. R. W. Thompson alone survives of a galaxy of oratorical ability rarely equaled, if ever equaled in any state.

One of the lights of this whig illumination, or one of the chosen voices of the great whig chorus, was Capt. Geo. W. Cutler of Vigo, then leader of the whigs in the lower house of the legislature. He was a "marked" man, marked equally by nature and the smallpox, with a deeply pitted face, a brilliant eye, a pleasant and genial expression, and an intellectual forehead that didn't belie his gifts. He was erratic, poetic, sympathetic, a gentleman by instinct, perverted into a debauchery later by evil associations. His "Song of the Steam" and his "E Pluribus Unum" were fulsome in their day, and deserve better of to-day than much that is popular and critically approved. A score or two later he married Mrs. Dix, widow of a state [illegible] old enough to be his mother, and here ended his [illegible] Cincinnati, where he long for years on the staff of the press when he might have been its foremost man. He spoke on the state house portico in the afternoon; after making several speeches previously in the hall, and the yard, and on the street—for [illegible] manship—and it may illustrate the temper of the crowd, as well as the quality of the man, to note an incident of the speech alluded to. He had spoken himself hoarse, and was worn out with work and the lack of food, for nobody appeared to go to dinner, and had to content himself from the cider barrel. [illegible] he hoped to excite he shook his fist and hastily howled: "D—n the lord forgive me, that's what I say, and it covers all that I've been trying to say; d—n the lord forgive me!"

It is now ten years since Mrs. Foltz was admitted to practice in San Jose. Eighteen months ago she removed to San Diego, where she has founded the Daily Bee, which she owns and edits. GEN. PHIL SHERIDAN.

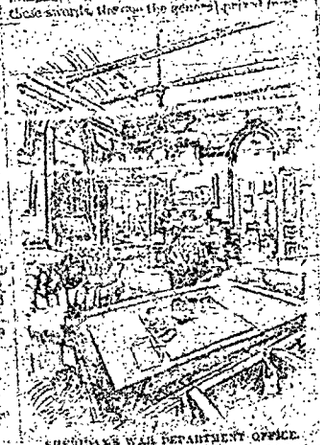
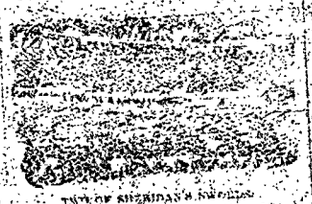
MEMENTOS AND REMINISCENCES OF THE GREAT CAVALRY HERO.

His Merchants' Flag and His Service Sword—Ho Five Old War Horses—A Story of the Battle of Winchester—Among the Generals Books.



SHERIDAN'S WAR EQUIPMENT OFFICIAL.



TYPE OF SHERIDAN'S SWORDS.

SIGHT OF SHERIDAN'S REVOLVERS.

Speaking of Gen. Sheridan's book, it will, I am told, be a volume of about the size of Grant's. It will be finely illustrated, and it and will be profusely illustrated, and it [illegible] with a laugh, and he refused a number of times to be interviewed upon it. He wrote it in fits for several years, and it was given to the press several months ago. The most of it, however, was written at Washington, in the general's library at his home. He wrote it systematically, sometimes turning out a number of chapters in a day, and at other times not writing at all for several days. He wrote rapidly, and the book will be a much greater work than is generally supposed. It will embody the observations of Gen. Sheridan during the Franco-Prussian war, and will record his impressions of the battlefields of this great struggle. He was present at some of the greatest battles of this war, and during some of them Bismarck and Kaiser Wilhelm watched the fight together. He was at the time fresh from his own military career, and he has probably discussed matters relating to this war in a new light.

The [illegible] book is a cozy residence on Rhode Island avenue. It is within a stone's throw of the British legation, and is in the most fashionable part of Washington [illegible] and it is to this house that Gen. Sheridan will come to take command of the army. Its furniture is characteristic of its owner. Pictures of army scenes hang upon the walls, and the backs of the noted American look down upon one in the library. There are a number of paintings of Sheridan's ride by the various artists, and every where is mentioned the marching scenes of the hero's career. The house is, however, a comfortable home, and the pictures of little Phil and his sisters stand upon the table and the [illegible] of their possessions are everywhere.

Gen. Sheridan was always very fond of animals, and this house of his contains many finely mounted specimens. A gorgeous wild turkey, from Sheridan's Road in Arizona, looks down from one of the walls of the dining room, and the antlers of a gigantic elk [illegible] of the hall there is a large rug, almost as big as a bed quilt. It is hung flat against the paper, with its head downward, and it is so mounted that it looks as though it might spring. Below this there is a magnificent Mexican saddle, which Gen. Sheridan once told me it took one man two years to make, and at the left of this stands a grandfather's clock which came out of an old Dutch face picking solemn welcome to every incomer.

The most striking piece of sculpture exercises relating to Gen. Sheridan is a statuette which represents him making that charge at Winchester. It is not more than a foot and a half high, but in every respect is full of life and action. Gen. Sheridan has given it the place of honor on his parlor, and he has had a photograph made of it recently for one of the illustrations of his book of memoirs which is now in press. It represents him on his horse making that noted ride. His hat is in his hand and he carries it furiously around his head as he urges the gallops onward. He told me a few weeks ago that it was made by Sculptor Kelly in New York, who came to see him at the Fifth Avenue hotel, when he visited the city and made sketches of him. "It was a good job," said the general, "but it was not a financial success."

A large number of Denver people have signified their intention of participating in the excursion.

Officer Chapman yesterday afternoon arrested a tramp whom he found among the trees north of the Denver and Rio Grande passenger depot. Near him the officer found a full set of silver spoons and knives and forks wrapped in a piece of an old gunny sack. The man denied all knowledge of the articles, and said that he could not tell how they came there. He was, however, taken into custody and placed in the city jail. An owner for the goods has not yet been found.

The manager of the Base Ball club has set aside the east section of the grand stand for ladies and their escorts and those who do not smoke. Smoking will be strictly prohibited in that section. This will doubtless be highly appreciated by the ladies who attend the games. Another feature that should meet with hearty approval will be "ladies' day," when ladies will be admitted to the grounds free and only charging them for seats in the grand stand. The dates for ladies days have not been determined on, but will be duly announced.

Mr. Fred Schluckebier, who is living on his ranch at the head of Turkey creek, has probably one of the best [illegible] in this county. He is now the [illegible] of ten offspring, which does not include the calves eaten by mountain lions, or the steers which he has sold for beef. The cow is a thoroughbred Texan, and has been owned by Mr. Schluckebier for sixteen years. He thinks that she was about six years old when he bought her. He has kept a complete record of all her offspring.

In speaking of the company which will appear at the opera house to-night in the great play "Shiloh," a California exchange says: "Last night the house was literally packed to listen to Hamblin Shazzard's noted 'She,' as dramatized by Mr. Brady of the Webster-Brady company [illegible] now are touring with the theatres along the line of San Diego. To say it was a success does not fill the bill, for its reception by the large audience was much more than usually falls to the lot of theatrical companies. The scenery belonging to the company was exceedingly appropriate, and of course added much to the attraction of the play. There was a continuous applause, from the rising of the curtain in the first act, to the closing on the fifth act, and the leading characters were [illegible] called before the curtain. It is surprising that the book of 'She' can be acted out in an evening's play of five acts, and the San Diego people will not soon forget the Webster-Brady company for affording them so rare a theatrical treat."

Young Men's Republican Club.

There will be a special meeting of the Young Men's Republican club held at its rooms, No. 20 South Tejon street, on Friday evening, June 29th, at 8 o'clock, to consider an amendment to the constitution and for other important business.

REAL ESTATE, LOANS AND INSURANCE!

Special Attention Given to the Collection of Rent, Interest, etc., and the care of Property of Persons sojourning Here.

Insurance Carefully Written in First-Class Companies Only.

Losses Promptly and Satisfactorily Adjusted.

STRANGERS, and others not posted in our Real Estate Market, often ask the question, "Where can I best invest my money to be sure of Quick and Profitable returns?"

1st. I would say, select a locality where you have the most SUNSHINE, the finest view of the GRAND MOUNTAIN SCENERY, etc.

2nd. See that you locate where you can enjoy the best WATER ADVANTAGES that our city affords. A home without water by the pension is a desert, and when I say "BEST WATER ADVANTAGES" I mean not only for irrigating purposes, which is very important, but also for all DOMESTIC PURPOSES. Our water supply at present is limited and unless greatly increased the time is nearer at hand [illegible] when every drop will be needed inside present city limits.

3rd. Do not locate where lots are too low in price—Low priced LOTS bring low priced HOUSES, and a PALACE surrounded by shanties will never sell for half its value. Better economize in other ways and secure a lot that will increase in value.

4th. Don't wait until the "Rock Island" comes in and then pay 25 per cent more than at present.

5th. Lastly, call and see us and we will convince you that "BOULDER HEIGHTS" possesses all the above advantages.
